Greene-Gasaway Architects assisted Federal Way Public School plan, budget, and develop pre-bond images to articulate the plan for new facilities within the District.

The plan included constructing a new high school in order to re-configure grade groupings to create four-year high schools instead of three-year high schools.

The $83 million plan also included a new alternative high school (Gates foundation school), additions to three existing high schools, a new middle school site and miscellaneous improvements.

The voters of the District approved the bond issue in 1999.

Greene-Gasaway is managing construction of the major facility components.
